Professional Summary

D'Real Graham is a dynamic community-oriented designer specializing in social practice, public-interest design, and grassroots organizing. As the founder of Black With Plants and co-founder of Keep Ypsi Black, D'Real is committed to amplifying marginalized voices through creative programming, advocacy, and sustainable community initiatives. His work at the intersection of food justice, public art, and activism fosters upward mobility and collective empowerment for Black communities in Southeast Michigan and beyond.

With expertise in DEI acceleration, human-centered design, and municipal governance, D'Real has led initiatives tackling food insecurity, maladministration, and educational equity. Through projects such as FRDM HALL and RAW (Revolutionary Art Workers of Washtenaw County), he integrates design thinking with advocacy to create inclusive, impactful spaces. He is particularly interested in food safety, urban agriculture, and sustainable food systems, aligning with the objectives of the Produce Safety Fellowship at Cornell.
